National Programme for Adoption of the Acquis (NPAA)

The Government of the Republic Serbia adopted the National Programme for Adoption of the Acquis (NPAA) for the period 2013-2016, on February 28th. The implementation of the NPAA, as an important tool which will enable better coordination, comprehensive and precise monitoring of the EU integration process and related legislative agenda, starts in March 2013 and ends on 31st December 2016. With the outset of accession negotiations, the NPAA will cover the results, activities and reforms related to the EU integration process. Since the EU acquis is constantly developing, the NPAA will be adapted annually to reflect and include these developments.

The NPAA preparation, as was the case with the NPI preparation, was organized in the framework of the structure of bodies established by the Decision on the Establishment of the Coordination Body for the EU Accession Process.

The NPAA structure includes three main parts: Political criteria; Economic criteria and Ability to take on the obligations of membership, and three appendices: Appendix A: Plan for harmonization of RS legislation with the acquis; Appendix B – Budget funds for co-financing and pre-financing of IPA projects and sectoral programmes for 2013, for projects and sectoral programmes relevant for certain criteria or chapters; and Appendix C – Measures planned within the process of translation and development of the national version of the acquis.

The document provides an overview of the state of affairs in certain area with the most important activities in 2012, followed by an overview of priorities for 2013 in terms of harmonization of legislation, with reference to relevant EU legislation with which harmonization is planned, as well as showing link to strategic documents (Analytical Report, Annual Report, IA, SAA).

Brief overview is given on current situation in terms of administrative capacities, providing measures for realisation of priorities that cover all other activities, including non-legislative measures and gives projection for the next three years of the NPAA implementation. Parts of the NPAA, also, give an overview of measures related to fulfillment of obligations from the Interim Agreement and Stabilisation and Association Agreement planned for 2013. According to the defined priorities an overview is given of current foreign development aid.

Serbian European Integration Office (SEIO) will prepare, based on electronic database data accompanying NPAA, quarterly reports which will be published at SEIO's website.

The NPAA is available at <http://www.seio.gov.rs/>

Swiss Support to Serbia

*Author: Isabel Perich,
Director, Swiss Cooperation Office in Serbia*

Switzerland is among largest bilateral donors to Serbia. In the past we funded projects worth over 250 million €. The aim of Switzerland in development cooperation is to support Serbia's efforts towards EU integration. We always align our programs with the Serbian Government's priorities. For 2010-2013 the programs are in the field of economic development, rule of law and democracy, education, and energy efficiency and renewable energy. The focus areas for economic development are maintaining macroeconomic stability, improving business environment in municipalities, increasing Serbian export, employment creation and regionally balanced economic growth. These reforms are aimed at increasing the competitiveness of the economy. Moreover, they bring about transparency, reduce possibilities for corruption, improve efficiency and service delivery of public administration. Ultimately, they reduce the red tape formalities. The Swiss support to regulatory simplification at local level resulted in 160 million € annual savings for the Serbian companies.

The second pillar of our cooperation is to reinforce the rule of law and democracy. We do this by supporting municipalities, aiding with the judicial reform and inclusion of vulnerable groups.

The third pillar is education and, together with Ministry of Education we play a pioneer role in establishing centres for teachers' training. We also support social inclusion of marginalised groups.

The fourth pillar, energy, is a good example of how we build on the past results. We started cooperation in 1999 with the import and installation of urgently needed technical equipment. Today, we support Serbia's efforts to increase energy efficiency and renewable energy.

All these reforms are underpinned by good governance principles as we wish to promote constitutionality and human rights and strengthen macroeconomic stability. Currently, we are preparing the new cooperation strategy for 2014-2017 that builds on existing assets and network of our Serbian partners, especially at the local level.

Serbia Contributes to Sustainable Development Goals

"Serbia is one of 56 countries in the world that has the privilege to put a stamp on the process of shaping the global development agenda for the period after 2015", William Infante, UN Resident Coordinator said at the kick off press conference for the initiative "Serbia We Want". The broad national consultation process is to gather a wide variety of proposals from Serbia's citizens that will help define the new global development agenda for the period after 2015.

Since mid January 2013, over 10,000 people have been directly included in the national consultations. When asked "What needs to be improved in order to create a better life in Serbia?", a majority of responses stressed the need to eradicate corruption, enhance economic growth, increase people's awareness of their own responsibilities, and strengthen institutions, as key priorities for Serbian society development .

Development Aid in Civil Society Sector

Author: Jelena Krstić,

Advisor for project Implementation and Monitoring, Office for Cooperation with Civil Society

Numerous bilateral and multilateral donors are delivering development aid in the civil society sector. European Union, Kingdom of Norway, Kingdom of the Netherlands, USA, Finland and United Kingdom stand out as the most important developing partners in the sector.

In various strategic documents EU perceive civil society as an important partner in social, economic and political life, and in promoting democratic values. EU supports civil society development in pre-accession countries through the IPA Civil Society Facility. CSF consists of national initiatives to strengthen the role of civil society, multi-beneficiary initiatives to establish regional and transnational partnerships, and knowledge and experience sharing initiatives. CSOs from Serbia are participating in all three components. CSF is complemented by a number of other policy and financial instruments, such as European Instrument for Democracy and Human Rights and EU programmes. As of November 2012, CSOs from Serbia are eligible to participate in the EU programme “Europe for Citizens”, which promotes active European citizenship and EU integration strengthening. The Office for Cooperation with Civil Society (OCCS) is the contact point for this programme in Serbia.

In late 2012, implementation of 17 projects approved under the CSF IPA 2011 national programme started. The projects deal with the rule of law issues, strengthening grass-root initiatives, building capacities of small CSOs, and enhancement of networking. The OCCS provided co-financing for 12 projects.

The OCCS is a beneficiary of support provided under IPA Civil Society Facility 2011-2013. The project will help to strengthen institutional capacity of the Office and support activities for creating enabling environment for civil society development, including the development of proper strategic framework.

According to a research conducted among the CSOs in January 2013, the priority themes for future financial support in the civil society sector are the rule of law, EU integrations, local organizations capacity building, environment, rural development and social inclusion. The majority of organizations target monitoring implementation of laws and adopted EU standards as the most important field of work.

USAID Supports Special Olympics Event

The U.S. Government strongly supports inclusion for all people, U.S. Ambassador Michael Kirby told parents and teachers at a recent Special Olympics event in Pancevo, part of an 18-month capacity-building program supported by the USAID.

USAID awarded Special Olympics International a grant in September 2012 to hold seminars in Serbia and Montenegro to educate communities about the potential of people with intellectual disabilities and to identify new ways to encourage their inclusion into mainstream society through youth outreach.

12 Serbian municipalities are participating in the seminars, which include classroom and practical sessions. The project involves local governments, schools, youth activity organizers, as well as people with intellectual disabilities and their families.

Each seminar includes a competition featuring two Special Olympics Unified Sports teams, in which people with and without intellectual disabilities play volleyball, basketball and football as equals. The teams later compete in local, regional, and national competitions. 34 teams are formed in Serbia and Montenegro involving 340 youths with and without intellectual disabilities.

Waste as Resource

GIZ project IMPACT has initiated weighing and determination of composition of municipal waste and wastewater with its partners, the pilot municipalities of Aleksandrovac, Bela Crkva, Krupanj, Kuršumljija, and Svilajnac. The aim of the analysis is to enable identification of flows of municipal waste and wastewater in municipalities and optimization of their use as a resource.

Based on this analysis, it will be possible to prepare feasibility studies for infrastructural projects in the area of waste and wastewater management, such as recycling centres, waste to energy facilities and wastewater treatment plants.

The projects will attract financiers—domestic and
